

Sunday morning came early it was our first night in our room and I slept solid until about seven. Ava didn't want to get up because she slept fitfully. But Oksana, Vlad, Kate, Dema, and Rita showed up with breakfast prepared and served us a much larger meal than we are accustomed to at that time of day, but it sure was good.

Vlad asked me to preach and teach Bible Class. We were warmly greeted by the members of the congregation and they paid close attention to the sermon. Their Sunday morning is backwards from what I'm accustomed too in that they have the assembly first and then Bible class. After a little prodding they began to take part in the discussion and our class time just disappeared.

Eggs and sausage Ukrainian style

Pumpkin & Cottage Cheese treat by Oksana

Following services, we had a great lunch in the fellowship hall. After lunch Vlad and I ran some errands while we did that, the ladies went to the store to shop for items that we needed. As is normal for such an adventure, we will have to make another trip today to pick up more things because we want to be able to cook for ourselves some of the time. It is amazing the items that we keep in our kitchen and never think about them, but here we will most likely make several trips to the store before we are able to feel really comfortable.

By the time all errands were completed it was getting late. We visited a little more with Vlad, Oksana, their children and Kate. They left to go home and Ava and I went to bed early and slept well.

Ava visiting with Kate